HORT FROM THE HILLTOP

HARRISON COUNTY HORTICULTURE NEWSLETTER

Hello, and welcome to summer! I hope each of you are enjoying the warm weather and the longer days! If you have a garden, landscape plants, planters with annual flowers, don't forget that during these hot temps they will need some water! Most plants need 1 inch of water/rain per week, so be mindful of our rainfall and irrigate plants as needed. Raised beds and container plantings will dry out faster than plants planted directly in the ground. Although we often need to water extra in the summer, its also important to remember that sometimes just as much harm can be done by over-watering. So monitor rainfall and watering closely, to have happy and successful plants.

Winter Damage to Landscape Plants

You've probably noticed while driving down the road, or in your own yard, a lot of plants that look like this, and the cause is winter damage. These two shrubs are at the extension office and I have been getting numerous phone calls from folks wondering why their plants are turning brown. There could be another issue going on, but most of the browning we are seeing right now is due to the 4 day long deep freeze that we had back in December. Some plants will survive and some will not. Some plants you may choose to cut back and allow them to regrow with all new growth. The solution is different for every situation. It seems the plants that took the hardest hit were boxwood, holly, and magnolia, but I have seen many others that have also taken a hit. Unfortunately there is no "one" solution. The plant will either survive and outgrow the damage, or it will not. Best of luck as you are making these decisions for your own landscape. The extreme, lengthy, cold weather we had is just something that we, and our plants, are just not used to.
